A KOREAN-ENGLISH DICTIONARY

INTRODUCTION

1. BACKGROUND. This dictionary was begun in 1953 as a research project of Yale University with the assistance of grants from the Program in Oriental Languages of the American Council of Learned Societies. Final preparation of this first edition was made possible by a subsidy from the U.S. Office of Education. We are grateful to Yale University Press and to Minjoongsugwan Publishing Company (Minseung seokwan) for their cooperation in the difficult job of putting the work into print and for their understanding when the untimely death of Professor Yang Ha Lee delayed work on revising the proof. We are grateful to the Pacific and Asian Linguistics Institute of the University of Hawaii for assistance in the final proof revision.

2. SOURCES. When we began our compilation, we had access to only the first volume of the six-volume Khun sacen (Seoul 1947–57) of the Korean Language Society (Hankul hakk-hoe); fortunately the remaining volumes were printed in time for us to make good use of them. We were aided by the earlier dictionaries of Lee Yuncay (Cosen-mal sacen, Seoul 1939), and J. S. Gale (Korean-English Dictionary, Seoul 1931). Two large dictionaries of great value appeared after we had completed our work: Kuiko tay-sacen (Seoul 1961) by Lee Hiseung (Huyang) and Cosen-mal sacen (Phyengyang 1960–2) by the North Korean Academy of Sciences. We have been able to incorporate much additional information from those two sources, by revising and supplementing our material while it was in proof. In addition to the dictionaries mentioned, we have been helped by many other reference works, as well as by informants who have checked reformation and supplementing our material was it in proof. In addition to the dictionaries mentioned, we have been helped by many other reference works, as well as by informants who have checked information and supplied us with examples.

3. COVERAGE. The emphasis in our dictionary is on the core of the language, and we have tried to give a full and accurate portrayal of the basic native Korean vocabulary. We have limited entries of Chinese loanwords to those more commonly useful, and we have not attempted to find exhaustive examples for each one; we have paid only cursory attention to recent European loanwords. A certain amount of encyclopedic information has been included for both general and linguistic interest, but we have not attempted systematic coverage of any technical field; we have checked our data against the best available secondary sources, but undoubtedly there are many errors. Dates for Korean kings — birth, beginning and end of reign, and death (when different from end of reign) — were kindly supplied by Professor Edward W. Wagner of Harvard University according to his system, which sometimes differs by a year from the usual Korean reckoning. We have tried to give a somewhat more extensive coverage of features of phonetic symbolism than that found in other dictionaries; entries are cross-referenced as “heavy” and “light” isotopes when vowel quality is exploited, as “intensive” and “para-intensive” when consonant strengthening is involved.

4. GRAMMAR AND SPELLING. The grammatical analysis which underlies the dictionary is that of Martin’s forthcoming Korean Reference Grammar, to which the reader is referred. We have strictly followed the spirit of the Hankul spelling conventions of the “Unified system” (Thongil-an) of the Korean Language Society (the 1948 version revised from the original system of 1933), even when South Koreans currently diverge in usage, as they do when they omit the reinforcing affixes in Chinese loanwords; but we have provided cross-references from other spellings likely to be met. Our Romanization incorporates morphophonemic features from both the Thongil-an system and the system standardized in 1954 by the North Korean Academy of Sciences, which differs notably in the treatment of word-initial i- and r- and in writing all non-automatic reinforcement with an apostrophe that is equivalent to our Romanized -q. Since we use a more generous system of word division in Romanization, the Romanized form often shows additional information about the structure of compound words. In our examples we have used liberal punctuation: a raised dot to set off particles and some postmodifiers [see below], a hyphen to show compounds of various sorts, and space followed by a hyphen to show initial abbreviation (indicated in Romanization by an initial apostrophe).

5. STANDARDIZATION. Although we have tried to adhere to the spirit of the spelling conventions of the Unified system, we differ from the grammatical analysis underlying that system — and the usual spellings in both South and North Korea — on a number of points:

(1) We treat the copula (ita) as a separately spaced word, even when abbreviated (‘ita).
(2) We set off particles [and those one-syllable postmodifiers seldom followed by a particle or the copula] by a raised dot.
(3) We treat ey se as a string of two particles rather than a single particle.
(4) Many elements treated as unanalyzed endings by Korean grammarians are here identified as ending + particle (e.g. -se, -to, -sa, -un, -um) or as modifier + postmodifier (e.g. -te, -on, -un, etc.).
(5) We follow Seoul speech in standardizing nitsa, phitsa, and khita in place of nitsa, phyetsa, and khita; we equate -ten with -tun and deny the validity of the distinction between the two endings.
(6) We treat the infinitive allomorph -a as standard only if the preceding vowel is o; if the preceding vowel is a, we write -e.
(7) We treat the shortening of -eye (infinitive of bases that end in ey) as -ey rather than -aey, and so write tay yo rather than tayey yo.
(8) For the infinitive of two-syllable (and longer) bases ending in -i-, we recognize both the abbreviated form (-iy) and the full form (-i-); for one-syllable bases we generally prefer the full form.

6. ALPHABETIZATION. In alphabetizing the Hankul entries, we have followed the general conventions found in Khun sacen in not distinguishing double consonants from single consonants in initial position except for words that are otherwise homophones, so that 달박 will be found between 달박 and 달박; but we have kept the expected alphabetical slot for each of the final double-consonant spellings, so that 달박 is between 달박 and 달박(-ie) rather than between 달박-nap and 달박-nie.

7. ETYMOLOGIES. We have indicated all known etymologies and suggested many new ones (often as queries). The word “compound” is used loosely throughout the dictionary to suggest that the reader may find further etymological help under the component parts. Many longer compounds are given simply as “examples” under main entries. Most of the Chinese binoms have not been marked as “compounds” since the components are often bound. But we have included all common bound nouns of Chinese [and pseudo-Chinese] origin in an initial entry under each homophone group, so that the inquisitive reader can look further into the etymology of most of the Chinese loanwords without leaving this dictionary. A Korean “tag-translation” reading is given for each of the bound nouns, together with the most common
8. PRONUNCIATION NOTES. When necessary, special notes have been added to call attention to pronunciations not predictable from the morphophonemic spelling. Vowel length, a remnant of an earlier system of pitch accent, is indicated (lexico-)phonemically rather than morphophonemically, for reasons to be explained elsewhere; the extreme difficulty of obtaining satisfactory data on vowel length has led to a number of inconsistencies which we hope to remedy in future editions. In our examples vowel length is generally not noted, unless the example is a simple lexical compound.

9. CITATION FORMS. Korean sentences come in three basic types: processive (those ending in a [processive] verb), descriptive (those ending in an ADJECTIVE [= "descriptive verb"], and nominal (those ending in the COPULA). We follow the usual Korean lexicographical convention in citing each processive verb both in the entry and in brief examples in the plain indicative assertive form (hata, mekta, sätta, etc.) even though that form is normally replaced in speech by the processive assertive (kanta, mekounta, sätta, etc.). But in citing examples translated as full sentences in English we use the processive form whenever appropriate. Corresponding to verbs and adjectives are [processive] VERBAL NOUNS and ADJECTIVAL NOUNS [= "descriptive verbal nouns"]; they make sentences with the aid of the base ha- which forms the auxiliary [processive] verb hanta "does" and the auxiliary adjective hata "is". Some of the adjectival nouns that we have entered also as nouns are seldom (perhaps never) used except in adjectival noun constructions; others occur more freely as subject, object, etc. We have departed from other bilingual dictionaries in giving most of the English translations in the third-person singular ("does/is") rather than the so-called "infinite" (= to + unmarked form); this makes the translations more readily available for direct use in sentences, and corresponds more closely to the Korean forms translated.

10. FUTURE WORK. We recognize that this work has many shortcomings and we trust that it will be possible to improve it in future editions. Some minor variations of spelling and punctuation will be found both in the Korean and in the English, despite attempts to achieve consistency. We look forward to suggestions and corrections from those who may use the dictionary; we hope that it contains something of value for each user and we apologize for errors and infelicities which may cause inconvenience to our readers.
From the morphophonemic form of a word as given by the Romanization (and by the Hankul spelling) it is possible to arrive at the actual pronunciation through a series of rules. The first set of rules (§§1—12) below converts the morphophonemic form to a phonemic representation of the word; the second set (§§13—24) converts the phonemic representation into a broad phonetic description, i.e., into rough directions to the articulatory organs. The arrow symbol here is to be read "convert (the form on the left to the form on the right)". We have omitted a number of rules that account for common variants, such as general dropping of h between voiced sounds, dropping of w after non-initial consonants, vowel raising, etc.

FROM MORPHOPHONEMIC FORM TO PHONEMIC REPRESENTATION

§1. SUPERSCRIP TES. Ignore superscript letters: in is pronounced the same as n, ny and ly are pronounced the same as y, i is pronounced the same as i. (The superscripts are to remind you of the North Korean spelling, which is usually — though not always — etymological.)

§2. REINFORCEMENT. Treat [vowel +] q as [vowel +] nn before l or y: alay i —> /alaynni/. Treat [consonant +] q as n before i or y: teq i —> /tenni/; kasq yang —> /kannyang/; mulq yak —> /mullyak/.

§3. SYLLABLE EXCESS. Unless it ends in a vowel, a spoken syllable must end in one of the seven consonants p t k m n ng l. This means that morphemes which end in other consonants (or in consonant clusters) must be reduced to one of these seven, except when there is attached the copula (ita) or some particle or ending that begins with a vowel (such as i, ey, uy or -umyen, -un, -ulye).

§4. NASAL LATERALIZATION. Change n to l when contiguous to l: Sinla —> /silla/; il-nyen —> /illyen/. Some speakers change all or many cases of -nn- to /ll/. Note: Some speakers reduce inflectional bases ending in ik, ip, ilp, and lm- to the lateral: ilk —> /ilt/; pilp —> /pilt/; ulph —> /ult/; sall —> /sill/. And morpheme-final h (after vowel, n or l) is usually suppressed before a vowel: noh.o —> /noa/, anh.e —> /ane/, ahle —> /ale/.

§5. LATERAL NASALIZATION. When preceded by a consonant (other than l), §4 i is changed to n: sip-lyuk —> /simlyuk/. Some speakers change all or many cases of -nn- to /ll/ as well.

§6. NASAL ASSIMILATION. Before nasals (m n ng) the oral stops (p t k) are assimilated in nasality (—> m n ng): ip man —> /imman/, mok man —> /mongman/, os man —> /omman/.

§7. APEX INSTABILITY. Before labial (p pp ph m) or velar (k kk kh) consonants, t and n assimilate in position of articulation (t —> p or k, n —> m or ng): os puthe —> /imman/; mok man —> /mongman/, os man —> /omman/.

§8. ASSIMILATION. Before k(s) the apical stop t becomes s: before o(c) and eh it becomes c: mös santa —> /mossanta/; mös saanta —> /mossanta/; mös santa —> /mossanta/; mös sesta —> /mossanta/; mös canta —> /mossanta/; mös ccanta —> /mossanta/; mös canta —> /mossanta/; töto —> /tussa/.

*But if followed by an ending that begins with a single t, c, or k, the h metathesizes (rather than reduces): nohoko —> /nohok/, anhtu —> /anthu/, alhe —> /aihe/. And morpheme-final h (after vowel, n or l) is usually suppressed before a vowel: noha —> /no/, anhe —> /ane/, ahle —> /ale/.
§9. CLUSTER REINFORCEMENT. The single voiceless consonants p t c k s are reinforced (to pp tt cc kk ss) after a voiceless stop (mostly p or k, since except before itself t has been eliminated by §7 and §8):

sip-pun → sipp-pun → (§10) /sippun/
lyuk-pun → (§1) yuku-pun → /yukpun/sip-to → /siptto/
lyuk-to → (§1) yuku-to → /yukto/ici → /ipeci/mecka → /mekca/
ipko → /ipkko/
mekki → mekoki → (§10) /mekki/ipo → /ipso/
mekeko → /mekkeko/

On to → (§3) ot to → ot to → (§10) /otto/

§10. CLUSTER REDUCTION. Two like consonants are permitted only if not followed by h; three like consonants are not permitted.

mösg ssanta → (§8) möc ssanta → /mökssanta/

§11. PALATAL ASSIMILATION. Replace th by 'ch' before morpheme-initial i or y: kol.i → /köci/, path ita → /pachita/. (But titye = /titye/.) Replace t by 'c' before morpheme-initial hi or hy: pahitita → /pachita/, pathye → /pachye/. Many speakers suppress y after s, o, and ch: usye → /usye/, kace → /kace/, pachye → /pachye/.

§12. ORTHOGRAPHIC VOWELS. The orthographic vowel uy is pronounce /u/ when initial, /i/ elsewhere:

uyca → /ucia/, huyta → /hita/, munuy → /muni/. But the particle uy is irregularly pronounced ey: nam uy cip → /nemyçip/. The vowel oy is usually treated as /wey/ in Seoul, but some speakers treat both oy and wi as monophthongs (front rounded vowels [ø] and [ų]). The vowel yey retains its initial y only after juncture (i.e., phrase-initial): kuyèysita → /këysita/, phuyèy → /phëy/, hyëyseng → /hëyseng/, silyèy → /silley/, mun-yey → /muney/.

FROM PHONEMIC REPRESENTATION TO PHONETIC ARTICULATION

§13. AIR STOPPAGE. The stops p t c k require total air stoppage at the appropriate points (§18). The lateral or flap l requires partial stoppage and the spirants s and h require sufficient obstruction to produce fricition. All non-nasal sounds require the nasal passage to be stopped.

§14. BASIC VOICING. Vowels (including y- or w-, m, n, ng, and l require voicing, but note the following exceptions:

(1) Most speakers unvoice high vowels in an environment with h or s (or consonant + h or s) on one flank and p t c k s h on the other flank: plichicsa, khulitsa, sWipsuta, chWiptta, alkkwussa, kúpssa, sWlla, sWlitta. But if there is only one vowel in the phrase it is usually voiced: sip, buk, swut; ha, heth.

(2) Some speakers unvoice the other vowels in the same environments: hAlkssayng, sAykssas, thOlka, thEpshEpshAta.

§15. VOICING ASSIMILATION. The simple stops p t c k are often lightly voiced between segments that are voiced as a result of §14.

§16. RELEASE. Initial simple p t c k are released with local aspiration; simple s is released with either local or pharyngal aspiration everywhere. Final p t k are unreleased.

§17. TENSION. All consonants are lax except when doubled. The double consonants (pp tt kk ss) are tense and pharyngalized; they are released with no aspiration.

§18. POSITION. The consonants are pronounced in the following positions:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>bilabial</th>
<th>dental</th>
<th>velar</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>p m</td>
<td>t n l</td>
<td>k ng*</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

*But velar closure is imperfect or absent in rapid pronouncements of /ng/, leaving a nasal pharyngeal segment in the front oral vowel l.

§19. PALATALIZATION. Before l or y most speakers palatalize s; some also palatalize ss. Although some speakers palatalize c only before l and y, many palatalize before all front vowels (l, ey, ay, oy, wi, wey, way), and most Seoul speakers palatalize c before all vowels. The lateral /l/ is generally palatalized before a consonant.

§20. NASALITY. The nasal passage is opened for m, n, ng.

§21. LATERALITY AND FLAP. The phoneme /l/ is pronounced as a lateral except: when it is single between vowels (ot, et, et, ot); between vowel and h even when the h is pronounced (pahlayng, silhem, chil ho), or initial (lato, leysutholang); in those environments l is a flap similar to the Japanese r.

§22. VOWEL QUALITIES.

(1) Front tongue position is required for i wi ey wey ey yay yay oy.

(2) High tongue position is required for i wi u wu; but the position is somewhat lower when the vowel is checked by a consonant at the end of the syllable. Mid tongue position is required for ey wey oy o, but many speakers have difficulty keeping front mid vowels distinct from low vowels, especially in non-initial syllables. Other vowels (ay way yah wa ya) are low. High and mid vowels are generally higher when long and/or syllable final.

(2) Strong lip rounding is required throughout a syllable containing wu or o (and for some speakers wi and oy); for all speakers, a lip-rounded (=labial) glide is required at the beginning of wi, wey, way, we, wa.

4. A front (= palatal) glide is required at the beginning of ye yey ye ya yu yo.

§23. Vowel Quantity. Two like vowels are pronounced the same as a long vowel: aa = a. (But many speakers suppress the length of non-double long vowels.) A one-syllable phrase that ends in a vowel is automatically lengthened, so that as cited words both to and tō sound the same.

§24. Junctures. Junctures (= pseudo-pauses) are inserted to mark off major parts of a sentence; they are seldom inserted between parts of compound words or phrases, and almost never occur before a particle or the copula. In neither Hanul spelling nor the Romanization is space intended to represent juncture; only the grammar can tell you when to insert or suppress a juncture.

TABLE OF ROMANIZATION SYSTEMS

The following table shows how several systems differ in representing the Hanul symbols. Minor details in each system, such as the abbreviation of wu to u after labials in the Yale system, are not mentioned. "McCune-R." refers to the McCune-Reischauer system; "Lukoff" refers to the phonemic orthography used in Fred Lukoff’s Spoken Korean; "1959—SK" refers to the system of the ROK Ministry of Education; "CK" refers to that of the North Korean Academy of Sciences (Cosen kwahak-wen), as reported in the 1957 Peking volume Fnyin wenci xiefa guic& pp. 210—5.

The text in the image appears to be a page from a book written in Korean. It contains various entries from a dictionary or a similar reference work, each entry consisting of a word or phrase, its pronunciation, and a brief definition or explanation. The text is dense and appears to be of a technical or specialized nature, possibly related to cultural or religious terms. The page also contains several illustrations or diagrams, which are not legible from the image provided. The layout suggests a structured approach, with each entry listed in a systematic manner, likely for educational or reference purposes. The page number is 252, indicating it is part of a larger work, possibly a textbook or a comprehensive reference guide.

Mr. Kim is there anything you want me to tell him? He’s a good friend of mine, you know. I want to introduce him to you. Mrs. Kim says she bought a watch at a pawnshop a few days ago and it has been quite good. I saw her wearing it the other day. I hope it won’t suffer. I’ve got some work to do. I’ll let you know right away.

There was no disturbance at all while we were there! It was so quiet. I had all sorts of pleasant experiences. I think I’ll go to college after all. I want to see what it’s like. It was a good decision after all.

I’m going to Hawaii this vacation, I want to go to Europe. I’m going to take a steamer because it is run by steam. It’s a good way to travel.

The annex, a side building, a building in back, a yard outside the house. We are mostly menfolk at our house, and I do not have a yard. The annex is a place where we have our daily activities, such as gardening, playing outdoors, and other outdoor activities.

We have a long wing of a house from outside the house. Outside the house, there is a small garden where we grow vegetables, flowers, and other plants. The garden is surrounded by a fence, and we can see birds and other animals in the area.

We also have a small room where we can store our belongings. Outside the house, we have a small tree that provides shade and beauty to the area. We also have a small pond where we can keep small fish and plants.

The annex is a place where we can spend time together as a family, and we enjoy the beautiful outdoor view.

after a lateral (p, ph, m); for this reason, within a word the romanization abbreviates "w" to "u" after a lateral (and also after y). Some Korean dialects do not distinguish "u" from "e" (e). After h/ the vowel u is often a dialect variant for standard i: 'kokkak, sohmmek, takhash in Hungary is substituted as a dialect variant for u: tilita—tilita. The vowel u is sometimes the HEAVY-ISOTOPIC counterpart to a, but this is often historical symbolism indicative of a former word ending.

This dress is too much pinched in at the waist.

I lost a book by lending it to him.

He swindled me out of money.

It is your mistake that makes you wrong.

You have got the wrong idea.

It goes around hurriedly, darts about.

I was run over by a car and lost a leg.

utter... is an all-out... is radical, drastic. 1 adj: characterized or marked by, denoting, or conducive to an effect similar to that produced by a deliberate, skillful, or efficacious act; a person or group who uses such means.

A radical (or radical act) is any action performed with intent or purposefulness that is intended to bring about a change in some aspect of the status quo or the status quo itself. Such action is often characterized by its intentional nature, its expected outcome, and its potential for producing change.

In this context, the term “radical” can refer to actions that are aimed at bringing about fundamental change in a particular area or system. These actions may involve the use of force, violence, or other means to achieve their goals. The term can also refer to individuals or groups who engage in such actions.

The term “radical” can also have a more general meaning, referring to something that is fundamentally different or opposed to the norm. In this sense, it can refer to ideas, opinions, or actions that are considered to be deviant or unconventional.

In the context of the document, the term “radical” is used to describe actions that are intended to bring about fundamental change. This could include actions aimed at altering social, political, or economic systems, or actions aimed at changing the behavior of individuals or groups.

The term “radical” can also be used to describe individuals or groups who engage in such actions. These individuals or groups may be characterized by their commitment to bringing about change, their willingness to take risks, and their determination to achieve their goals.

Overall, the term “radical” can refer to actions or individuals that are characterized by their intentional nature, their expected outcome, and their potential for producing change. However, the meaning of the term can vary depending on the context in which it is used.

The railway was recently opened as far as Pusan.

The railway is known as the ‘Blue Line’ because it was originally laid with blue bricks.

The railway language is Korean, and the ticketing system is similar to that in Japan.

The railway is well-maintained, and the railcars are clean and comfortable.

The railway stations are equipped with telephones, and the ticketing process is straightforward.

The railway offers a convenient and efficient way to travel to and from Pusan and other destinations.

From the text, it appears that the document contains multiple sections or topics, but the specific content is not clear due to the fragmented and incomplete nature of the text. The text seems to be discussing various adverbial forms and their uses, possibly in a linguistic or philosophical context. However, without a clearer context or additional text, it's challenging to provide a coherent summary or translation. The text includes terms like "postnom. adj." and "used after the infinitive of an," which suggests discussions on the use of adverbial forms in English or another language. The presence of Korean terms like "hata" and "hata'" indicates that the document might be comparing English and Korean linguistic structures. Overall, the text appears to be an academic or linguistic discussion, but more context is needed for a precise understanding.
